

VOICES OF ENGAGEMENT

FROM THE ENVIRONMENT PROGRAM

"I am a faculty member of the Environment Program because of the talents and passion of my faculty and staff colleagues and our students."

CRAIG HOOD, Director of Environment and Biological Sciences

"I teach in the Environment Program because I believe that better informed students who are skilled in critical thinking and applying their knowledge for others are quite capable of changing the world."

ROBERT THOMAS, Mass Communication and Director of the Center for Environmental Communication

"I am a member of the Environment Program because I want to help train students to become informed and effective stewards of our natural resources."

FRANK JORDAN, Chair of Biological Sciences

"The Environmental Studies students who take my courses are some of the most deep-thinking; they employ an ecological perspective to bring together spiritual and scientific understandings of the world."

ANNE DANIELL, Religious Studies

"I am a faculty member in the Environment Program because I am skilled at demystifying the nature we are so much a part of but often do not realize it."

DAVID WHITE, Biological Sciences

"I teach in the Environment Program so that my students may understand the destructive values and views of reality that underlie our eco-crisis as well as inquire and act for the sake of ourselves and other species."

FRANCIS COOLIDGE, Philosophy

"I am a faculty member in the Environment Program because I'm convinced that addressing the pressing environmental issues of our time requires interdisciplinary (and multidisciplinary) approaches."

PAUL BARNES, Mullahy Endowed Chair in Environmental Biology

THE ENVIRONMENT PROGRAM AT LOYOLA

Environmental Science | Environmental Humanities | Environmental Social Sciences
Environmental Studies Minor

chn.loyno.edu/environment